On July 30th, the Verbier Festival [9], one of the most prestigious music festival in Europe, hosted ?Concerto for Piano and science? [10], a public workshop organized in collaboration with the ASSET project. Aim of the event was to stimulate the audience by alternating public health messages and high level classical music performances, played by the Russian piano player Andrey Gugin ^[11], laureate of the international Beethoven and Gina Bachauer competition. His piano pieces was accompanied by the presentations of six international scientific experts, who explored different topics ranging from public health to neuroscience. The whole event has been filmed and each intervention is now available at the following links:
